

Logline

A New World Order is initiated with women in combat that's an interbreeding for hybrid reptilian humanoids in a Raising The Reptilian Race dress-up game.

Tagline

Anything goes and everything is fair game.

Synopsis

Branches to bubbles - fashionistas are in a virtual existence, a Raising The Reptilian Race Dress-up game. Yuki and Airi, two Japanese teens are in their dress-maker's shop. They're trying to create a new world order with fashion, but the lizard race, its media's everywhere! Lai Thanh Dung, he's in the dress-up game, as he recruits Shen Mi Rong who works with Qiao Mei Lu, Xue Ai Da and Shi En Tian. They're creating digital media for the dress-up game at The Institute of Vocational Education in Hong Kong; working on the R-complex part of the brain and controlled by the reptilian elite, Chen Yinchu leads this development with fashion in this Raising The Reptilian Race dress-up game and along with Hai Chao, Lei Cheng, Haun Qiao and Jaun Jia Li as his loyal students.

The enemy boss, Hiko Yoshida, he utilizes the Wanchai Tower, as he's a Yakuza vying into their fashion for a Neo-nazi reptilian elite existence. Yui, Yuriko, Natsumi, Miyuki, Aoki, Tomoko, Miki, Tamayo and Naoko are in the dress-up game, as they are representative teens of Japanese subcultural fashion.

"Shut up!" "Anything goes!" "Everything is fair game!"
"Anything goes and everything is fair game!"

Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the law, for the Reptilians are their maternal ancestor. Their subculture fashion - anime-ish, it's a neurobiological reptilian window. Qualitative spatial reasoning forms their intelligent Geographical Information Systems. They're the lizard's captured models, as sinister and dark forces of the reptilian race control media.

Yuki and Airi go out there for the Oriental patterns that capture the Chinese tradition with a modernization that's for a global taste. They become Reptilian as a fashion transformation that defies belief, an otaku iru as techno-freaks that are dispersed in cyberspace - Dragon Stomp!